Q125 Welcome! Thank you for taking part in this research study. In this session, you will be interacting with three different versions of an evidence synthesis interface designed to support policy analysis and research decision-making. These interfaces provide different types of assistance, such as summarisation and retrieval of evidence from global development research collections. For each interface, you will complete a short tutorial and then work through two applied tasks based on real-world development questions. After each set of tasks, you will answer a brief set of questions about your experience. Your responses will help us understand how different interface designs influence information retrieval, reasoning, verification behaviour, and decision-making when working with evidence. The study will take approximately 40 minutes. Please take your time with each task. If anything is unclear at any point, you may ask for clarification. Participation is voluntary and you may stop at any time. You can view the full consent form here. Let's begin with some demographic questions.

Start of Block: C0 Tutorial

Q155 Interface A: No Chat In this part of the study, you will use a baseline version of the evidence search interface. This version provides standard keyword-based search and document browsing. On the next page, you will complete a short tutorial task to familiarize yourself with how this interface works. You may spend as much time as you need on the tutorial. You do not need to complete the tutorial task fully if you already feel comfortable using the interface. You may proceed to the main task when you feel ready. Faciliators: Please guide the partcipant to switch to the No Chat interface using cmd-k (Mac) or ctrl-k (Windows) using the hidden button on the bottom right of the screen.
